Monroe Doctrine Barred 'Systems'

"We should consider any attempt on their part to extend their system to any portion of this hemisphere as dangerous to our peace and safety.

This was the salient passage in the Monroe Doctrine, as laid down in 1823 by President James Monroe.

Speaking of foreign nations in general and in particular of Spain and Russia, President Monroe said: "We could not view any interposition for the purpose of oppressing them, or controlling in any other manner their destiny, by any European power, in any other light than as the manifestation of an unfriendly disposition toward the United States . .

The significance of the Monroe Doctrine did not lie in its intent to close the New World to military conquest. It lay instead in its intent to close the New World to Old World influence by any means.

THE OLD WORLD "system" was the specified target of the doctrine. The fear of Britain, which had relinquished a shaky hold on the New World, was that its rivals for power would take advantage of its withdrawal To avert this Britain urged the United States to post No Trespassing signs and promised to enforce the order with the

The hope then and the hope still is to make the New World safe for popular government. There has been despotism in the New World and there will be more. But despotism has not been permitted to dig in and establish itself here as acceptable practice.

This is the issue that has developed in of being thrown out.

IT IS NOT the remote possibility that the assorted Communists who have moved into Cuba might use the island as a military base for aggressive takeover of New World

It is not the more remote possibility they might launch an invasion of the United

It is the immediate likelihood they are going to establish their system elsewhere in the New World, as they already have established it in Cuba.

Their "unfriendly disposition" toward the United States is obvious.

Everything they have done in Cuba reflects animosity toward the United States. This country is the butt of all their pro-

THEY KNOW clearly what the Kennedy administration says isn't clear yet to its own observers that they are in Cuba to make trouble for the United States and to make a mockery of the Monroe Doctrine.

If they never fired a gun or had a gun they could fire, their intent would be the same. They are extending their "system" the Western Hemisphere; they are doing something they have been warned since 1823 not to do because it would be considered "dangerous to our peace and safety."

There is real danger the Kennedy administration may be drawn into dialectics over Russia's real intentions. The intentions are obvious. There is nothing to argue about, except how soon they must get out on pain press as Adam Clayton Powell, disclosure of his 1962 odyssey in Europe to study equal job opportunities for women must have been election-year shock.

Rep. Powell also serves as pastor of the Abyssinian Baptist Church in Harlem, in the heart of the 16th congressional district he has been representing in the last seven congresses. He was accompanied by an office receptionist and a woman who is assistant counsel for the House Education and Labor Committee. Rep. Powell, chairman of the committee, is famed for his junkets and this was a dandy.

It covered territory and it included a number of things that promised to keep borecom at a distance. There were theaters and night clubs on the schedule and Army staff cars and drivers, even a leisurely cruise off the coast of Greece.

All this revealed just before an election gressional candidate into a fit. We do not constituents.

Even for a congressman as used to a bad know how Rep. Powell felt about it, but we can make this guess:

That he stifled a yawn and murmured something about people who never learn and never give up. In his 16th district, Rep. Powell is more likely to be praised than censured for living high on the government hog. Every revelation if his inclination to do it and of his ability to get away with it seems to help him in the only place he worries about-where the votes are.

He is apparently as impervious to the suspician that he may be tapping the perquisites of office as James Riddle Hoffa, who thrives on publicity is about the way he spends Teamsters Union money. But the members of the union don't seem to mind.

The worst thing that could happen to people like these would be for their consituents to learn they were eating cheap cuts of meat and saving strings. They owe a large part of their success to critics who can't understand why the Powells and Hoffas would be enough to throw an ordinary Con- are more envied than censured by their own

Miss America Earned It

Some of the other eve-filling contestants in the Miss America Pageant this year may have had weight problems as troublesome as the one that the newest Miss America, Jacquelyn Jeanne Mayer of Sandusky, O., confesses she had

When she was 16, Miss Mayer recalls, her weight had ballooned up to 150 pounds. If she had continued to let it increase at that rate, she would now-at 20-weigh a fraction under 188. Her beauty of face and figure would be buried in a mound of unneeded

If Miss Mayer's willingness to confess her excess weight of 150 pound and how she was able to bring it down to 115 by dieting isn't the greatest boost diet control ever had, the Miss America Pageant is held in secrecy and no one pays attention to the beautiful girls who compete in it.

Starting last Sunday morning when the news got out and continuing into this week, tens and hundreds of thousands of girls and women tempted to overindulge their appetites have pushed themselves away from the table more resolutely than they ever were able to perform this act of self-denial

The girl from Sandusky, O., looked like Miss America, more so than any of the others in the group - and all of them were attractive. But there is a Miss America look. Jacquelyn Jeanne Mayer was the one who had it this year.

Incidentally, not all Miss Americas have had it. Maria Beale Fletcher, last year's winner did not have it, in my opinion. When no one has it, of course, the outcome of the competition is up for grabs. It's catch-a catch-can among a group of pretty, talented girls. The judges are in a pickle.

Last spring I consented to take a crack at judging one of the preliminary rounds leading up to the big event at Atlantic City. I learned to my surprise that the whole thing was done by voting on secret ballots so you didn't even know what the other judges were

When all the votes had been tallied we learned for the first time which way things had turned out. High Cost of Tragedy

The figures on traffic deaths are shocking enough-over 38,000 in 1961. The number of those injured to greater or lesser degree, temporarily or permanently, is many times

But add to this the dollar cost and you have a staggering drain on the nation's human and material resources. That cost in 1961 was $7.9 billion-the highest ever.

This bill included property damage, surgical and medical costs and loss of income because of absence from work. It averaged out to $42.93 for every man, woman and child in the United States.

Multiply these billions by a few decades and you will come up with a figure not greatly inferior to the national debt-and about as productive.

are boys. The only qualification I could claim is lifelong girl-watching. Even at that I am unorthodox. As often as not I watch girls because they seem to be more interesting than ordinary, not because they're more beautiful, Flying to Paris on Air France last June, I watched one girl, a stewardess, for six hours. She wasn't even pretty. But what she lacked in looks she made up in style -way of walking and talking and doing her job.

A few days later on the plane from Paris to London she was a passenger, presumably on her way to start another flight to somewhere. In her street clothes she was also worth watching. That's the way it goes with girl-watching, as I do it. It's the girl, not just the girl's appearance.

The new Miss America is an eyeful per se - the all-American girl prsonified. They do have a certain look about them. If it could be described, the description would have to start with something about a resemblance to the girl who never really lived next door but you wish she had.

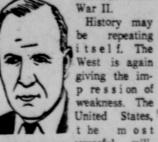

The all-American girl personifies an idea so standard it can be drawn from memory by artists. She is the one you feel sure would back up her good looks with good breedingthe same type of thing that enables experts to look at animals and tell at sight which ones have the best blood lines.

Jacquelyn Mayer looks like a champion. She's better he. I picked her out of the

David Lawrence xwerful military force in the West - without whose aid World War 1 and World War II could not have been won between the two governments. by the Allies - is wobbling in its policies. This could lead to a gross miscalculation by Nikita Khrushchev, just as indecisiveness on the part of Washington misled Kaiser Wilhelm in 1914 and Adolph Hitler in 1939 as each assumed that the United States would not go to war over any European question.

Today the situation seems to be growing more serious, as it is beng assumed in Moscow that the United States will not even go to war over an American question the taking over of control in Cuba by the Soviets, who are supplying military equipment to the Cuban regime under an open agreement

THIS DEFIANCE of the Monroe Doctrine has been ignored by President Kennedy. He has made no public protest over Soviet policy. He has announced, in effect, that he agrees with the Soviet viewpoint that Cuba is merely engaging in a "defensive" operation with Soviet help.

This startling change in America's historic policy has apparently been accepted by supporters of the administration in Congress, though here and there some exceptions are noted.

The President, in his public statements, shows that he considers the Cuhan situation not to be an American question by itself, but as somehow directly related to the Berlin crisis.

The Soviets may be interpreting this stand to mean that Mr. Kennedy is hesitant to do what he would perhaps like to do inCuba for fear that the Soviets might intensify the East German problem and might be tempted to take chances on a belligerent move against West Berlin.

President Kennedy doubtless hoped to give an impression of resoluteness when he asked Congress for "standby authority" to call up 150,000 reservists. The trouble with the move is that

ing ordered up now. Mr. Kennedy says he might call them up if matters get critical somewhere. THIS AMBIGUITY in American policy implies that the United States isn't really acting on principle, but is feeling its way expediently from one crisis to another while it waits for its adversary to continue step by step with its aggressive course.

Sen. Hubert Humphrey, of Minnesota, assistant Democratic leader, gives the reasoning back of the administration viewpoint. In an interview quoted by the Associated Press, he says:

"I think it should be clearly understood that the President has no immediate intention for use of this authority. Prompt congressional approval will be a demonstration to our allies and our enemies that the elected representatives of the people are firmly behind our commander-in-chief."

Will the men in the Kremlin take this to mean that Congress approves inaction in Cuba? If the United States will not fight on a clear issue that arises 90 miles away from its shores, will the passage of a resolution authorizing the call for reserves produce the psychological effect which the administration intends to create? The resolution itself makes no mention of Cuba, and in all probability the regular Marine Corps -not the 150,000 reserves -would be used if there were any intervention in Cuba by the United Not a word has been spoken publicly to Moscow, moreover, by the Washington government about her violation of the Monroe Doctrine in shipping to Cuba arms and "technicians."

Does this mean that the administration acquiesces in the Soviet move and that all that's necessary now for the Communists to gain a foothold in a Latin-American country is to infiltrate a government there, call the military buildup "defensive," and the Unit-

The Roberts show claims many firsts in the thrill show business. Among them are the bus jump, the ice wall crash and the dynamite coffin stunt.

In the bus jump, a car will travel up a ramp and leap some 60 to 90 feet over a continental bus. The ramp, some nine feet in height, is the biggest used in thrill shows today.

The dynamite stunt is unbelievable. Six sticks of dynamite are placed around the assimilated coffin, which is made of wood, and only protection is a blanket and a crash helmet.

The ice-wall crash also is something new. A car traveling at top

SELF IMPROVEMENT

It's never wrong to attempt to improve on one's own good looks. However, you must know just how far you can go without ven-turing into the ridiculous. Don't type-change yourself to the breaking point. Play up your own good points. Some women are tempted to redo themselves because they aren't happy with their natural endowments. When thinking in terms of self-improvement, keep your own type in mind.

With self-improvement in mind, be sure that you keep regular salon appointments.
